MORNING TIME

36 weeks of family discipleship & foundational learning

BRIGHTER DAY PRESS

Welcome to Morning Time!

I am thrilled that you've decided to join me and my family on this year-long journey.

Many people believe that the success of a day depends largely on how a person spends his first thirty minutes of the morning. As a homeschooling mama, I've found this to be true. The first half hour of the day with my children sets the tone for the next 12+ hours. But even more importantly, the content with which we fill these hours is what becomes the foundation of our lives. As Annie Dillard wrote, "How we spend our days is, of course, how we spend our lives. What we do with this hour, and that one, is what we are doing. A schedule defends from chaos and whim." What better way to set our day in motion than by hearing God's Word, singing timeless hymns, reading aloud, and feasting on the finest literature, art, and music together?

Proverbs 22:6 says, "Train up a child in the way he should go; even when he is old he will not depart from it." Morning Time is designed to engrain a rhythm into our lives so that long after we no longer practice it, it still speaks to us, instructs us, and guides us in the way we should go. In Ephesians 6:4, Paul tells parents to "bring [their children] up in the discipline and instruction of the Lord." Our task then, as Christian parents, is weighty and can often feel overwhelming. I have sought to lighten this load by creating a purposeful, gospel-centered plan that I wish I would have had when I began homeschooling.

Morning Time is divided into three 12-week terms, 36 weeks in all. Each day is scheduled so that you can open the page to the current week and follow the prompts to guide your Morning Time.

In many homeschooling curricula, I've noticed that while there might be a short Bible reading at the beginning of a school day, the plans then move on to other subjects with no connecting points. To remedy this, I've sought to create a Morning Time plan that encompasses the entire narrative of the Bible. Each 12-week term has a specific theme:

Term 1: Creation
Term 2: The Fall and Redemption
Term 3: Our Future Hope
